

Hospital School

When a child is hospitalized, one concern is the fear of falling behind in school. The Hospital School located at Lucile Packard Children's Hospital provides a school-like environment for these school-age children from kindergarten to twelfth grade to continue their education while going through medical treatment.

The school has seven full-time credentialed teachers, three instructional aids and one administrator. They are all employees of Palo Alto Unified School District. The school offers a fully accredited academic curriculum including enrichment programs such as art and drama. The goal of the staff is to help every child achieve a successful and smooth transition back to their home school after medical treatment.

This program was implemented in 2018 with the Palo Alto Unified School District. Our membership provides school supplies and books to approximately 450 students at the Hospital School.
